Unlocking Your Leadership Potential

Leadership Empowerment for a Creative Workforce Training Programme

1.0 Introduction

You and/or others in management roles at your company may have leadership attributes, but what you really need are managers with leadership SKILLS. There is a huge, painful difference and it costs organizations hundreds of thousands of dollars annually per untrained leader.

Too often people are promoted into management positions primarily because they are top performers who demonstrate responsibility to achieve results. The problem is they are never systematically developed into a leader, just appointed to be one. Achieving results as an individual is very different from accomplishing significant, consistent results through others.

Your leaders are the role models for your organizational culture, catalysts for employee engagement, and the one reason employees stay with your firm.

2.0 Objectives

- Establish what it takes to be a leader.
- Identify bottle necks to leadership.
- Different leaders and styles.
- Unlocking one's potential.
